

Flt. Sgt. Kenneth Andrew Fogg R/56267 RCAF

A 460 Squadron Wellington pictured at Brighton

Canadian Kenneth Fogg was the wireless operator/air gunner in one of two Wellingtons lost by 460 Squadron RAAF during a raid on Stuttgart on the night of May 6/7, 1942.

He was part of the crew of Wellington Mk IV, Z1254 UV-L, which was hit by flak and burst into flames near Karlsruhe during an attack on Stuttgart. Only the rear gunner survived as the aircraft crashed near Mannheim. Kenneth and the remainder of his crew are now buried in Durnbach War Cemetery. His was one of four aircraft lost on the raid, two of them from 460.

Kenneth was one of only a handful of Canadians serving with 460 at this stage of the war. He was the 22-year-old son of Lewis and Elizabeth Fogg of Mount Royal, Montreal.

The others who died were the pilot and A Flight commander Sqdn. Ldr. Colin Gilbert, who was an Australian serving in the RAF, co-pilot Sgt. Reginald Henry RAAF, observer Sgt. John Shearer RAAF and the British wireless operator Sgt. Christopher Dixon. The sole survivor was the rear gunner, Sgt. James Lake RAAF.

His name can be found on panel 036.
