

Sgt. Alan Ord 1548857 RAFVR

Alan Ord was the 19-year-old rear gunner of a Wellington lost after it is believed to have suffered engine problems while on a mining operation off the mouth of the River Elbe.

His Wellington, HE578 AS-G, was one of three aircraft from 166 Squadron at Kirmington tasked with mining the estuary during a heavy bombing raid on nearby Hamburg. The Wellington had left Kirmington shortly after midnight on 3 August 1943 and two hours later a distress message was picked up by the Danish coastguards indicating the aircraft was suffering from engine problems and asking for assistance. Nothing more was heard from AS-G.

His was one of three bodies never recovered and he is now remembered on the Runnymede Memorial.

Alan and his crew had been with 166 Squadron since the beginning of May and this was their 15th operation, all but one of them flown in AS-G, and their second mining trip. He was the son of A G and Maria Ord of West Hartlepool, County Durham.

The others who died were the pilot WO Royce Burton, navigator Sgt. Bertram Harris, bomb-aimer Flt. Sgt. David Carson and wireless operator/air gunner Sgt. James Connel.

His name can be found on panel 080.
